Latent Fingerprint Development

Latent Fingerprint Development for Law Enforcement will examine the basic science of fingerprint processing. The course will cover fingerprint powders and advanced chemical development to include blood stain analysis. This course offers valuable information that every officer should know when working at a crime scene. Those attending will be shown sequencing techniques and techniques to maximizing the volume of ridge development. The course covers the collection of trace and DNA evidence. It is recommended that those attending bring their camera and if possible a macro lens if they have a DSLR camera. The course is hands on and students will participate in practical exercises.

Course Topics Include:
- Three Different Types of Fingerprint
- Various Surfaces
- Method Reactions in Ridge Development
- Advantages of Chemical Processing
- Sequencing Dry and Wet Surfaces
- Macro Photography
